

YELLOW JACKETS DEFEAT SPIDERS IN HARD BATTLE

The two eleveners were in prime shape, and but for injuries Richmond College may have put up a better game. Dobson has his shift plays working to perfection, and it was through this method of attack that he gained most of the ground. Neither coach was willing to uncover all that he has, as the contest was merely an exhibition. Dobson is very certain that he is going to win the cup. His one drawback is lack of substitutes, and in this regard Reiss has the better of the argument.

Coach Bernier, of Hampden-Sidney, was on the side lines watching the play. He may or may not have learned something; certain it is that he saw no trick plays. Even forward passes were few and far between.

Richmond-Macon won the toss and kicked to Richmond College. King received the ball and ran with it for twenty yards. From the time the spiders got the ball until they made the touchdown the ball did not change hands. It was a steady procession down the field. The spiders went through the Yellow Jacket's line for good gains. From the twenty-yard line they ran the ball over the Randolph-Macon line for the first touchdown of the game. That happened in the first two minutes of the first quarter, the final play being a pretty forward pass by Ancarrow to Jones, and Ancarrow kicked goal, 7 to 0 in favor of the spiders.

of the ball on the spiders' twenty-yard line.

Fight Hard in Second Period.

The second quarter started with Randolph-Macon fighting hard. After an exchange of kicks Randolph-Macon started line plunges, and Driver hit the line, carrying the ball over for a touchdown. Bane kicked goal, and the score was tied at 7-all. Bane kicked to Richmond College, and Klevessahl received the leather and ran twenty yards before he was downed. The spiders again started line plunges, Klevessahl going through for twelve yards, Ancarrow for five yards and Klevessahl again for seven yards. Then a forward pass by Ancarrow was intercepted by Blount, Randolph-Macon's right half back, and he went for thirty yards before he was downed by Klevessahl. The Yellow Jackets braced, and a forward pass netted them fifteen yards. The ball went over on downs, and Richmond College kicked. Time was called, ending the first half.

In the opening of the third quarter, after Bane had kicked to Richmond College, Klevessahl fumbled the ball and Driver, for the Yellow Jacket, got it and ran for a touchdown. Bane kicked goal, and the score was made it to 7 with the Yellow Jacket holding the big end.

Neither goal was in danger the rest of that quarter. Much time had to be taken out on account of injuries to the players. Bush, Randolph-Macon's right tackle, got hurt and he stayed in the game. Ancarrow on the next play was hurt, and had to be taken out of the game. Wicker, who went in the game in the first part of the third quarter, was sent back to take Ancarrow's position, but his coming back in the game was illegal, and Richmond College was penalized fifteen yards.

Richmond College kicked, and on a forward pass, which went outside and over the goal line, a touchdown was scored by Richmond College. The ball was brought to the spider's line, and put into play. Randolph-Macon was offside, and was penalized five yards. King fumbled the ball, but it was not costly, as the spiders recovered the ball again after holding the Yellow Jacket for downs. Robins then hit the line twice, each line for seven yards. The quarter ended with the spiders in possession of the ball on their own twenty-five-yard line.

The fourth quarter was a hard fought one clear through, and the spiders twice had the ball on the spider's line. Both times the Yellow Jacket's line braced and held the spiders for downs. Two substitutions were made in the first of the quarter, Randolph-Macon taking Bush out and Richardson going in in his place. Richmond College took Newton out and put Privott in. Richmond College kicked to Randolph-Macon. Bane receiving, and was downed in his tracks. Bane then tried an end run, but was tackled by Jones for a loss of ten yards. Bane then kicked to King, who went for ten yards before being tackled. Then the first wrangle of the game started. Klevessahl was running with the ball and Bane tackled. They started slugging and were ruled out of the game. Midway went in Bane's position, and Bane in Klevessahl's. Richmond College seemed to recover and started line plunges with good effect, but when on the Yellow Jacket's ten-yard line, Ancarrow putting it there from the line, they lost it on a fumble. Jones broke through the Randolph-Macon line and tackled Driver for a loss of five yards. Randolph-Macon then kicked, but Richmond College did not have a chance to do anything, as time was called and the game ended.

Both teams played the game. Klevessahl, King, Ancarrow and Jones played the best for Richmond College, while for Randolph-Macon, Driver and Bush were the stars.

PRINCETON LOSES TO HANOVERIANS

common proceeding for Dartmouth, and rather meritorious withal, judging from the wild and jubilant shrieks of the Dartmouth students at a time, for Dartmouth is not generally regarded as an amphibious institution.

The final score, and we are speaking of the football game, was 6 to 0.

This is intended to deal mainly with the strange struggle staged on the Princeton gridiron, when a large coterie of strong young men slashed around in puddles of mud and water like infant buffalo in a favorite wallow, until certain issues on which they had differed had been settled.

Reader, if you have never seen a football game on a "sea of mud," you have something left to see.

A rain that began driving across the Jersey lowlands to-day was a steady drizzle when the game began at 2 o'clock this afternoon, and it continued throughout the first half of the game, which saw the triumph of Dartmouth over Princeton for the first time in some years.

Slimy As Fish.

Out on that muddy field trotted the opposing teams all spick and span, the young giants from the hills of New Hampshire wearing lively green sweaters, while the boys from Old New Jersey carried their usual sweater markings of sharply contrasting orange and black, but a moment after they had piled up in the opening rush, they were as slimy as so many eels.

Another moment and their features had been obliterated by mud. Occasionally a torn jersey showed a brief strip of white fleshing underneath, to prove that the muck had not seeped into the wearer's soul, but from head to foot the boys were coated with a black plaster. When a muck hit the ground under the impetus of a flying tackle, he skidded for yards. The ball was slippery as a peeled plum, and squirted from the fingers of the players in the most disconcerting fashion.

Crowell, the umpire, came on the field wearing a pair of knickerbockers and a nice white shirt. He was followed by Snow, the referee, arrayed in knickerbockers and a lavender shirt. Whenever a young gentleman engaged in muckraking came up for aid he would find Mr. Crowell or Mr. Snow conveniently near, or would use the shirts to wipe their muddy hands on. Soon they had both Messrs. Crowell and Snow ready for the laundry, and then the football bugged them. They towelled their hands on the official trousers, much to the annoyance of the wearer.

Only two classes of people attended this game to-day—newspaper men and football bugs. The former went because they had to, and the latter because they could not help it. There was a profuse attendance from Dartmouth, while a large concourse of Princetonians dropped in their customary stand.

Women Are Absent.

There were mighty few women present, mighty few indeed. Here and there a bonnet with drooping and sadly depressed trimming could be seen in the crowd, but the feminine attendance to-day was probably smaller than it had been at any big football games in recent years.

Of the football game we shall now speak briefly, beginning with that point in the third period, when young Reddy, of Hanover, N. H., blocked a kick propelled from the muddy toe of Mr. Giles, of Princeton, N. J.

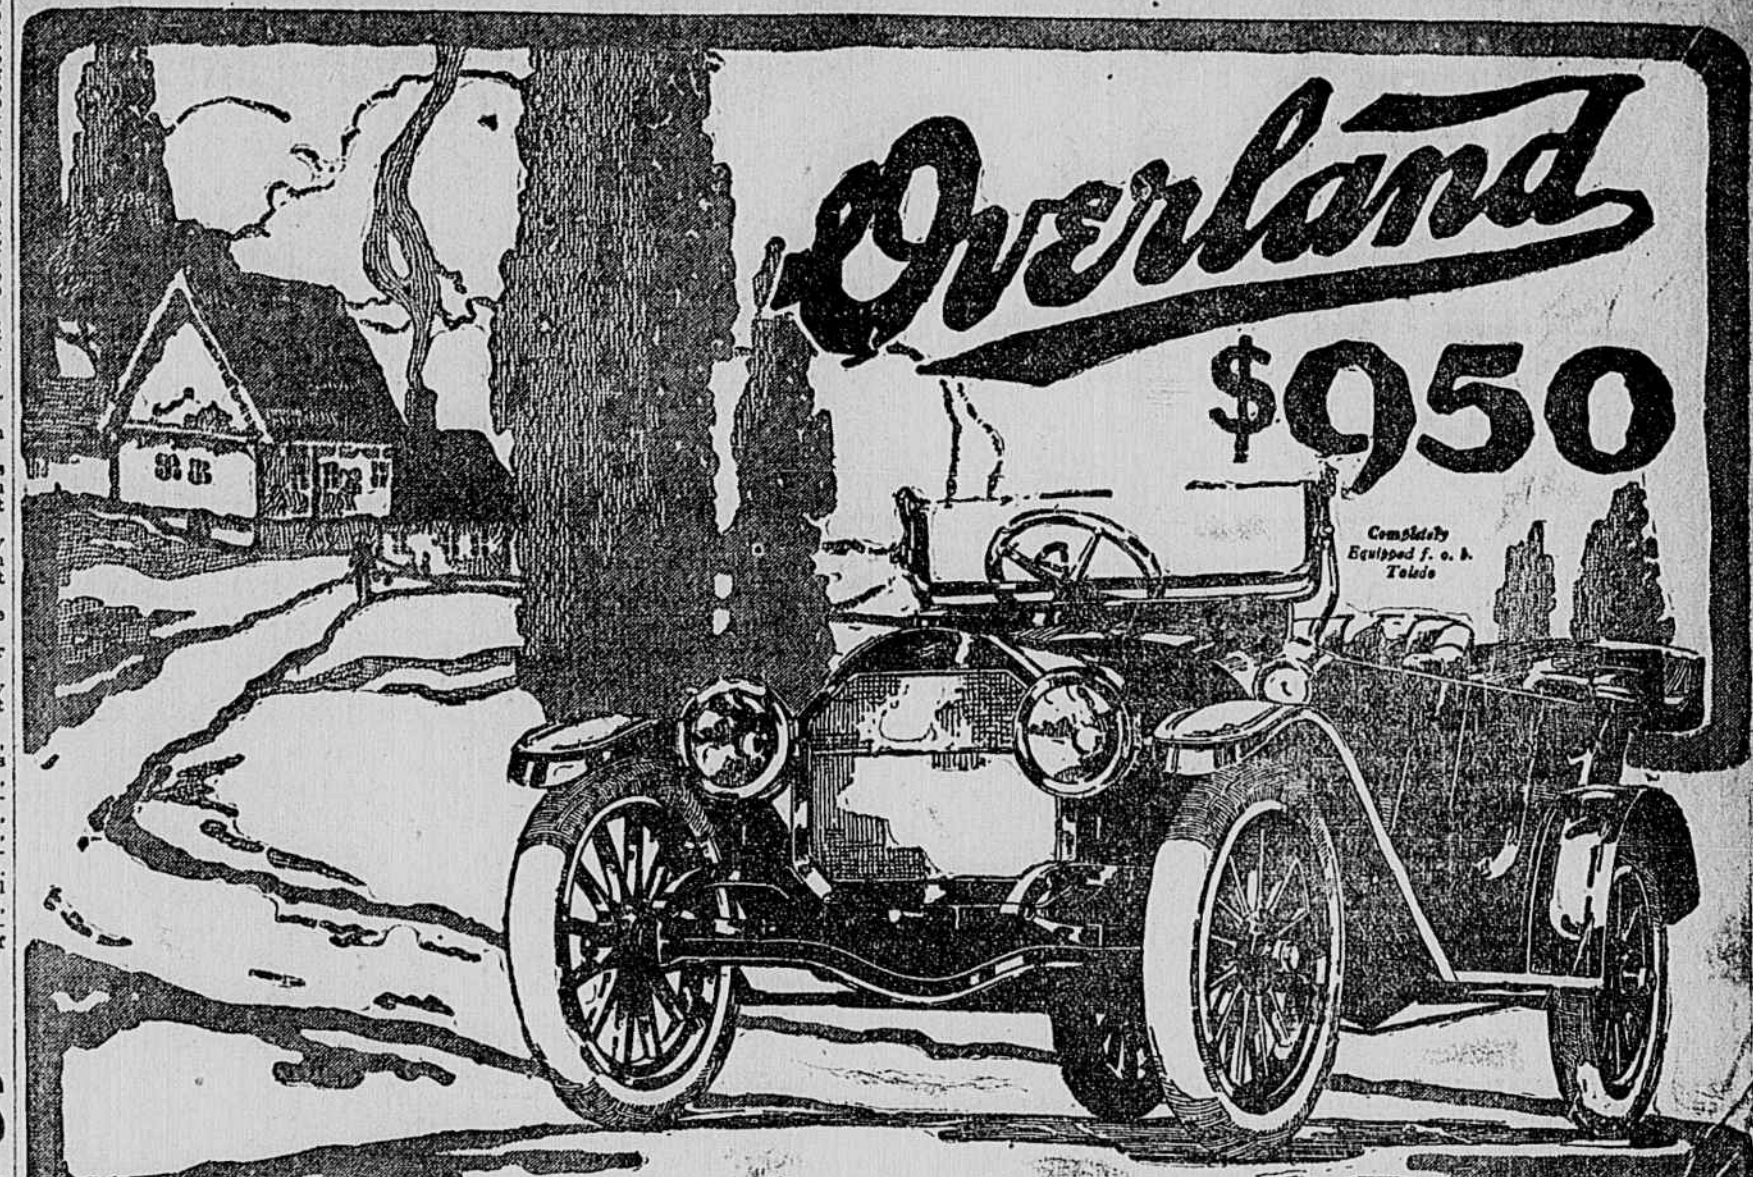

This incident arose after a perfunctory points-up punting up and down the dismal field, without material advantage to either side, although the Princetonians seemed to know the softest spots in the mud and the hardest places to punt. The ball became the temporary property of Dartmouth on Princeton's twenty-five yard line, and Dartmouth then made first down at the five-yard line, and second down at the five-yard line. At least, that's what a man told us, though we would never have suspected it ourselves. With the ball on the five-yard line, as started, Whitney, of Dartmouth, and one of the brightest stars of the afternoon, as well as one of the muddiest, plowed his way through the slush to approximately the ten-yard line.

Dartmouth delegated its young Mr. Llewellyn to take the ball and dash around the Princeton left end. Young Mr. Llewellyn tucked the ball against his ribs and galloped across the Princeton line, his cleats cutting back clots of mud and quartzo of water.

Misces Try for Goal.

Hogsett missed a try for goal, and that's about all there was to the game, except that the boys changed clothes between halves, and got their other suits all muddled up, too. Princeton should have scored several times, but the slippery ball would not stick to the claws of the tiger, which is quite a simile, one way and another.

In the fourth period, Giles's punt was fumbled by Ghee, and Longstreth recovered it on Dartmouth's twenty-yard line. Then Princeton wallowed through to Dartmouth's ten-yard line, but just then Emmons fumbled, and Curtis snatched the ball up as it was about to drift away on the water. He galloped forty yards down the field toward the Princeton goal. En route, Curtis seemed to become deeply interested in the transactions of a Princeton man, who was trying to lay alongside him in mid-channel for

The Economy of "One Man" Direction

IT IS obvious that a motor car manufacturer can build 50,000 cars at much less than he can build 1,000. But the difference in quantity buying and in quantity manufacturing are not the only elements of saving which can be effected.

Each factory has its own system, its own machinery, its own personnel. Some are still making cars by the old routine with the conventional methods and machinery. Some have advanced more or less and a few, a very few, are producing on the up-to-the-minute efficiency basis by special machinery and special methods particularly adapted to the size and type of the car being made.

We say without hesitation, and it is a fact well-known in the trade, that the great Overland plants are unquestionably the most thoroughly, efficiently and economically equipped and managed.

This great business has the advantage of the personal direction of one single man—the man who founded the business, the man who has grown up with it from the beginning, the man who developed it—John N. Willys.

Mr. Willys has clung steadfastly to the watchword "The most car for the least money." And each year he has more than made good this principle.

To produce a car of the Overland size, power, strength and high quality, and to sell that car for such a remarkably low price, has taxed, to the utmost, all the resourcefulness, foresight, ingenuity, untiring energy and wide experience of, not only Mr. Willys, but a veritable army of the industry's most able men.

Mr. Willys knows men, and it is well known that no manufacturing institution, perhaps in the world, can boast of a larger or more efficient and well-trained, well-paid, well-satisfied organization.

In the newest Overland increased value at a decreased price is more prominent and apparent than ever.

You will make a grave mistake if you fail to thoroughly examine our latest model.

tackling purposes, otherwise the Dartmouth man might have continued on, and on and on to the place where he was going. He became so absorbed in the Princetonian, however, that his pursuer overtook him and rubbed his nose in the mud. Later on in that same quarter, Princeton had the ball close to Dartmouth's goal, only to see two forward passes go askew. Line-up and summary:

VANDY HUMBLER BY WOLVERINES

the second, and one in the third, and added three goals after touchdowns, two punt-outs being missed.

Vanderbilt started off with a whirlwind attack, but was checked in Michigan's territory by heavy penalties, and after that the game resolved itself into a practice match for the Michigan players. The Commodores' forwards were unable to open holes through the heavy Wolverine line for the backs, who were compelled to confine their attack to end runs. Every forward pass attempted by Vanderbilt was either intercepted or incomplete, while Quinn, Lyons and Torbitt pulled off beautiful passes almost at will.

Vanderbilt lost its single chance to cross the Michigan goal lines when, in the third quarter, Sikes, who had, single-handed, carried the ball to the Wolverines' eight-yard line, fumbled when he was fiercely tackled by Meade. T. Brown was seriously injured, having several throat cartilages torn loose, and was finally carried from the field in a critical condition. Sikes, T. Brown and Captain E. Brown played brilliantly for Vandy, while Hughtitt, Galt, Quinn and Lyons starred for Michigan.
